

EXCHANGED

Learning and Teaching in the Arts in the Digital Age

What kind of skills are required for e-learning and e-teaching in the arts? What do educational technologies and digitally-based methodologies look like? And which best case practices can art universities learn from?

Exchanged is a collaborative, interactive and international format for art universities to promote the sharing of ideas and experiences in digital learning and teaching. Our focus is on exploring concepts together and learning from one another based on best practices. Collaboratively, we create new digital possibilities to shape art education in the digital age, helping students and teachers achieve learning and teaching goals, digitally.

Exchanged takes the form of five live collaborative webinars and a final “live” conference in Zurich. You can expect to learn more about digital learning and teaching initiatives at other art universities, receive inputs from other professionals on your e-learning challenges, get inspired to try new initiatives, and widen your professional network.

We are looking for interested partners and participants, who want to take part and play an active role.
